Information about COVID-19

What is Coronavirus?

Coronavirus infects the lungs. Symptoms start with a fever followed by a dry cough, which can lead to breathing problems.

This is a new, continuous cough and means coughing a lot for more than an hour, or having three or more coughing episodes in 24 hours (if you usually have a cough, it may be worse than usual). It takes five days on average to start showing the symptoms, scientists have said, but some people will get symptoms much later than this.

Protecting yourself and preventing spread

Coronavirus spreads when an infected person coughs small droplets - packed with the virus - into the air. These can be breathed in, or cause an infection if you touch a surface they have landed on, then your eyes, nose or mouth.

The best thing you can do is regular and thorough hand washing, preferably with soap and water for at least 20 seconds. In addition, coughing and sneezing into tissues, not touching your face with unwashed hands, and avoiding close contact with infected people, are important for limiting the spread.

The Government has put into place "social distancing" measures requiring that people stay a minimum of two metres apart. The Home Office has advised detention centres that practices should be reviewed to ensure adequate social distancing.

Vulnerable groups

If you have one of the following medical conditions, you might be more vulnerable to COVID-19:

- Diseases affecting breathing/lungs, like asthma
- Severe heart disease, such as heart failure
- Severe kidney disease
- Severe liver disease, such as hepatitis
- Severe neurological illnesses, like multiple sclerosis (MS)
- Diabetes
- Sickle cell disease, or problems with your spleen
- A weakened immune system because of conditions like HIV/ AIDS, or medicines like steroids
- You are also more vulnerable if you're over 70
- Hypertension (high blood pressure)

What the Home Office has told us will happen in detention centres:

1. There will be posters in common areas about washing your hands and keeping clean. Cleaning materials and toiletries such as soap are available on request in all IRCs.
2. Staff will be cleaning surfaces that are touched regularly.
3. There will be social distancing in communal areas like the library, and you should be able to eat meals in your rooms.
4. If you feel unwell, you have a right to request to be put in isolation for your own safety and that of others.
5. You should not expect to be transferred, but if you're told you are being transferred you can call us or your solicitor if you have one.

If you feel something isn't right, you can talk to centre management or Healthcare. You can also call Detention Action.

COVID-19 and your case

Case reviews

The Home Office has committed to reviewing everyone's detention in light of COVID-19. It is unlikely that you will be told when this has happened, but you may wish to seek advice from a solicitor.

Removals

Many removals to the following countries have been stopped. If you could face removal to one of these countries, you may benefit from speaking with a solicitor. If not, you can still seek legal advice.

Contacting a solicitor

You may want to speak to a solicitor about your situation. There are two types of solicitors you can speak to:

An Immigration Solicitor is someone who helps with your immigration case, for example helping to challenge your deportation. A Public Law Solicitor can challenge decisions or actions made by the government, when they might be unlawful, for example the Home Office's decision to detain you.

You can have a Public Law Solicitor and an immigration solicitor because they do different things. Both can be covered by Legal Aid.
